Dear Dr. Henney, 8469 '99 JU 12 P3:14,

To use human antibiotics in animal feed is just shortening the time in which human pathogens become resistant to the antibiotics.

It seems that each segment of our population has its own very personal agenda on this subject. Food animal raisers like to use antibiotics whereas they might do better to clean up feeding lots, factory farms & slaughter houses.

Physicians see the peril in using antibiotics so widely, but they have only a relatively small voice in the matter.

We need an agency such as yours to protect the public at large, not just special interests.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth & Edgar Lehman
